workplace giving...

Increases Job Satisfaction

63% of the younger half of Generation X and 63% of the millennials would prefer to work somewhere where easier access to charitable giving is present.

Boosts Employee Pride

54% of employees who take pride in their organization's contributions to society, it makes them feel engaged in their position.

Encourage Employee Engagement

When employees participate in a charitable giving as part of their corporate wellness activities, there is 18 to 22 percent more engagement compared to employees who compete solely for prize money.

Create Effective Leaders

When employees take part in giving activities they use their skills to educate others, save money, give back to the community, and create leaders within your organizations.

Strengthen Brand Image

55% of consumers are willing to pay a higher price for a product or service offered by a company that advocates social causes.

There are several ways for organizations to express their commitment to social impact. Apart from sponsorship activities, an organization can also build an employee giving program that benefits not only the society but also boost employee wellness.
